ABSTRACT

A survey of colleges was conducted to identify those colleges that offer programs for the learning disabled, and the survey results are compiled in this directory of 83 programs. Each program description includes the college's name, address, and telephone number; program title; fees charged to the student for special services; name, title, and telephone number of contact person; criteria for college admission; data required for admission to program; specific services provided; extent of services; personnel available to students; number of students handled by each special education teacher; attendance requirements for a preliminary summer program; study skills courses offered; advisory services available; modifications/compensatory methods available to students; and allowance for utilization of calculators, tape recorders, peer notetaking, and word processors. A list of 60 additional colleges, which lack complete programs for the learning-disabled but do offer some limited services, concludes the directory. (JDD)

PREFACE

Many resources are now available which identify colleges that offer programs for the Learning Disabled student; however, these resources do not detail which specific services are available at each school. Due to this information vacuum, we began to survey colleges to obtain necessary details of these services. The result of our survey culminated in the unique resource that follows.

In our research, we discovered a number of colleges which lacked complete programs but did offer some limited services to Learning Disabled students. These colleges are listed in the back of our publication.

Since many colleges and individuals have become aware of our research project, we have received many inquiries and requests from people throughout the country asking that we make the results of our research available to them. Thus, we decided to publicize our survey.

Due to the unprecedented demand for this book, as well as the tremendous support for our work, we have responded with an updated and expanded second edition.

We want to thank the Simsbury Public Schools for their support in this endeavor, along with the parent volunteer aides at Simsbury High School who spent countless hours assisting in our research project.
